

Building Better Relationships One Dog at a Time

Socializing your Puppy

Socialization is a process of exposing your puppy to a variety of people, places, noises and situations through a positive experience in order to help him be confident and less reactive as he or she grows up. Children go through a similar socialization period but since dog's age so much faster than humans, their socialization period is short – from puppyhood to six months and ideally before four months of age.

The more experiences you expose your puppy to...during this critical time, the less reactive they will be in adulthood. But it is crucial that these experience be positive so the below worksheet will provide you with an opportunity to list how comfortable your pup is with the situation. Your puppy may be relaxed and comfortable, a little on edge or not good at all. Those experiences that are not at all good or even a little on edge, should be repeated in tiny intervals until the puppy gets more and more comfortable.

Dogs are not good at generalizing...what this means is that they might know something 100% in your home but completely forget it somewhere else, like in the veterinary office, so it's crucial that you work with your puppy in many different settings, not just at home.

We use treats in dog training because they are valued so highly by dogs, they can also be delivered quickly which is important. So when you're working with your dogs in these different settings, be sure to be very generous with the treats. If at any time your dog will not accept a treat, either the treat isn't good enough or your dog is too stressed to thing about food. (Try to remember the last time you were scared or tremendously nervous...maybe the last time you slid on some ice? Were you hungry? Could you even think about eating?)

Note...any time you bring your puppy anywhere, take a look at the situation. Your dog is likely a few inches from the ground and seeing the world in a completely different perspective than you. If it's crowded or scary from that low height, pick him or her up or move them to a safe area.

Also note, puppies need vaccinations to protect them from deadly diseases like Parvo or Distemper (both of which are prevalent in dogs to the south of Durango). Be sure to have your puppy vaccinated as early as possible and avoid bringing him or her to places where unvaccinated dogs may frequent, like dog parks, etc)

To proceed....go to a new place, stay calm and upbeat, be sure there isn't any tension in the leash. Expose your puppy gradually and reward often and show your happiness!

Remember the key here is good experiences!

If your dog is upset or concerned, repeat the activity in smaller doses with more food to make him or her more comfortable!
